Of 570 Agree to Return to Hanoi

By Alvin Shuster

SAIGON, May 31 (NYT) .- Only 13 of the 570 disabled prisoners that South Vietnam offered to return to North Vietnam have agreed go, officials said tonight.

The refusal of the rest of the prisoners has placed the United States and the South Vietnamese governments in an embarrassing position, possibly opening the wey for charges by Hanoi of "bad faith" by the two governments on the prisoner issue.

The United States had hoped that the release of the prisoners would increase world pressure on Hanoi to reciprocate hy releasing some of the American prisoners held in North Vietnam. Thus, American officials exerted firm pressure on Saigon to persuade it to meet all of Hanoi's terms for the release, scheduled for this Friday.

But to the dismay of American and South Vietnamese officials, and the International Red Cross officials who screened the sick and disabled North Vietnamese prisoners, only 13 were found willing to return. South Vietnam even turned an additional 90 disabled prisoners over to the Red Cross officials for questioning.

Hanoi Tapes Played

Tape recording of the Radio Hanoi broadcast agreeing to accept the "Vietnamese patricts" were played to the prisoners, who were asked by Red Cross officials if they wished to return home. South Vietnamese officials, angry that so few prisoners agreed to go north, said they plan to return the 13 as scheduled. Hanol had stipulated a ship-to-ship transfer off the coast of the Demilitarized Zone dividing North and South Vietnam, A 24-hour truce will be put into effect around an 18-mile radius of the transfer site.

Officials said that some prisoners may yet change their mind before Friday and decide to return, but the total is not expected to change substantially.

The release of 570 prisoners would have been the largest of Vietnamese armored personnel the war. The last prisoner recarriers, government regulars, lease was in January when 37 militiamen and national police North Vietnamese prisoners were were involved in the fighting, repatriated. So far, more than Mr. Vicov said.

fire shot-filled beanbags, wooden blocks, or plastic pellets. It costs $75. "The 40-mm bore alone has got to scare people to death," said

Robert Brokaw, a manufacturer's representative. The three-inch beanbag, traveling at 200 feet per second, hits a person with tremendous force, knocking him to the ground at a distance of 300 feet, and incapacitating him for many minutes. "You cannot build a nonlethal weapon that won't permanently injure or kill someone under certain circumstances." Mr.

Brokaw explained. "But if used properly, it is a highly socially responsible weapon." Mr. Brokaw said his company did not give special courses in instruction to police officers on

If fired directly, "the multi-Victnam. baton (wooden blocks) will kill people," Mr. Brokaw said. The blocks are meant to be fired at the ground, then to ricochet off at the legs of people in a crowd. Robert Mainhardt, the president of MBA Associates, said his company was selling stun-guns to governments all over the world-Romania, Czechoslovakia, Yugo-slavia, England, West Germany. "They've just released them for South Africa; they really need them there," he said. "It's a way to be a Joe' Louis for a few minutes and not kill a guy." The company is now also selling lts stun-guns to private security organizations. It plans to make lower-powered stun-gun available to the private citizen within a few months.

One Illinois police officer expressed concern that the shot-filled bags might break on contact with a person's face, thus causing eye injurles. Mr. Brokaw said that if a bag hit a person's nose, it would break it. But he added that the pancake-like projectile minimized damage by spreading the shock waves over the body. The gun can also be used to fire tear gas grenades more than 550 feet.

Lisbon could turn out to be an extremely embarrassing meeting for the French. Since they do not belong to the NATO military command, they must either decide not to participate at all in the force reduction talks, or, if they want to participate, they must convince themselves that the talks will be multilateral and not blocto-bloc.

Though the talks would involve only Warsaw Pact and NATO countries, both sides envisage them as multilateral. For the Russians, the talks would be a way of presenting their Warsaw Pact partners as apparent equals, which was a prime reason for wanting a security conference. NATO is also expected to push for multilateral definition, which would help the French off the hook.

The petition, signed by 13 women and made available today to Western correspondenta here, is addressed to Communist party chief Leonid L Brezhnev and other leaders.

According to Jowish sources, the mothers intend to hand over the appeal to officials of ths Supreme Soviet (parliament) tomorrow.

"Our children do not have tha possibility to learn the language and history of their people, to learn and love their culture," the women wrote.

"Our chidren are deprived of a motherland in the most exact meaning of the term and we fear for their future. The future of people without a motherland is the degrading and sorry future of outcasts." The mothers declared they are willing to let their chidren-aged eight months to 19 years—go to Israel even if they themselves were not allowed to leave the Soviet Union.

And a key question would be the new levels. Present Warsaw Pact European strength is about 1.2 million men, with NATO close behind at 1.1 million. The Warsaw Pact has roughly twice as many tanks, but NATO many more long-range bombers. The two sides are roughly equal in numbers of fighter and groundsupport aircraft. What would be the new levels?

An added question is the fate of medium-range and tactical nuclear missiles in Europe and NATO aircraft equipped to carry nuclear bombs against Warsaw Pact targets. Reports from Vien-ns last week following the latest SALT contacts indicated that Washington was now thinking that these weapons might be discussed in any force reduction talks.

Aside from the MBFR talks at Lisbon, the ministers will also be meeting to elect a new secretarygeneral to replace Mr. Brosio, who is retiring. Mr. Brosio's re-placement will be Joseph Luns, the Dutch foreign minister for the last 18 years.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 31 (UPI) .- About 1,000 young people attending a rock concert featuring the Grateful Dead took an unexpected trip last night when their apple cider turned ont to be spiked with LSD.

Alison McDonald, a Berteley woman who attended the concert by the Grateful Dead, the New Riders of the Purple Sage and R. J. Fox at the Winterland Anditorium, said that during a band break an anonymous voice announced over the loudspeaker system:

"Those of yon who are going to get some liquid refresh-

She said that in less than an hour she knew she had taken something more than apple cider.

"It was okay acid," she said, "but I feel sorry for anyone who took more than two sips."

Police later reported that during a five-hour period near-Mount Zion Hospital treated more than 30 concert-goers who complained of going through a "bad trip." No one was hospitalized.

Police, who estimated that 1.000 of the 4,500 attending the concert were affected by the spiked drinks, said they arrested six men and one woman for investigation.

Audie Murphy Killed in Plane Crash

ROANOKE Va., May 31 (AP). -Wreckage of a light plane carrying Audie Murphy, actor and America's most decorated World War II hero, was found near the top of a wooded mountain here today. The police said six bodies were recovered from the burnedout craft.

State Police Lt. Marvin Kent said the bodies were "badly mangled," and no attempt to identify them would be made at the scene. Originally it was believed there were only five in the plane. Rescue workers reached the crash site at 5 p.m. after an afternoon of hiking through rugged mountain terrain to a point near the peak of a mountain. The pilot of the Virginia State

Police belicopter that hovered over the wreckage for an hour after its discovery said the plane burned on impact. Numbers still visible on an unburned portion of the tail assembly matched those of the chartered twin-engine Acrocommander boarded by Mr. Murphy and other businessmen in Atlanta Friday morning. The helicopter pilot said ft appeared from the wreckage and the fact that impact occurred only 300 feet from the top of Brush Mountain that the plane was trying for a landing approach to Roanoke's Woodrum Field, 20 miles to the east. The site of the wreckage is 20 miles east of the West Virginia border in rugged highlands.

The plane was en route to Martinsville, Va. The last reported contact was when the pilot, Herman Butler, radioed the flight service station at Woodrum Field shortly after 11 a.m. Friday, saying he would land there at 11:49 a.m.

Known to be with Mr. Murphy, 46, were Claude Crosby, president of Modular Management, a subsidiary of Modular Properties, Inc., of Atlanta; Jack Littleton, representing a group of investors from California; Raymond Prater, a lawyer representing Modular Management, and Mr. Butler, A spokesman for Modular Properties, Inc., which specializes in factory-built homes, motels and other structures, said the four were going to Martinsville to inspect a company plant. Mr. Murphy was considering investing in the firm, he said.

Won Medal of Honor NEW YORK, May 31 (Reuters). -Audie Murphy looked too young to be sent into war-but he hecame the most decorated American soldier in World War II and was credited with killing, wounding or capturing 240 Germans single-banded.

He won virtually every U.S. medal for gallantry open to him, including the Congressional Medal of Honor, the highest combat award.

His other decorations included

Audie Murphy in 1970

the Distinguished Service Cross, the Legion of Merit, the Silver Star with cluster, the Bronze Star, and three Purple Hearts.

The son of a Texas sharecropper, he enlisted on his 18th birthday and while doing his basic training once fainted on the parade ground. His screeput snarled: "How can we win the war with these babies?" and recommended that young Murphy transferred to the cooks school, hot he appealed success-fully to his commanding officer. Later at Fort Meade, Md, waiting to go overseas, a chaplain was struck hy Mr. Murphy's baby face and, horrified by the thought of him going into the front line, got him put in the post exchange. He managed to join a draft sect to reinforce the 3d Infantry Division in North Africa. Ee did not see action until the Sicilian campaign, where he won his corporal's stripes and fered a bout of malaria. As a staff sergeant he fought in southern France. A mortar shell killed two of his buddles and wounded him in the heel. In November, 1944, he was commissioned as a second lieutenant. The colonel who pinned on his bars reportedly growled: "Shave, take a bath, and get the hell back into the lines." short time later he was wounded by a sniper.

The exploit that won him the Medal of Honor occurred late in January, 1945, near the Germanheld village of Holzwihr, in France.

His unit had suffered heavy casualties and Lt. Murphy was the acting company commander. Attacked by six enemy tanks and waves of infantry, he ordered his men to withdraw and then set up a one-man counter-attack.

With a field telephone, he gave orders to an artillery unit, which plastered the area with shells. Using a 50-caliber machine gun in the turret of a knocked-out U.S. tank, he held off wave after wave

Key Test Seen Near for China's ICBM

By William Beecher

WASHINGTON, May 31 ical considerations, the analysis (NYT) .--- China, whose long-range missile program has lagged behind American predictions, appears on the verge of two important breakthroughs, in the view of some analysts here.

China is rapidly getting into position to test-fire its first liquid-fuel intercontinental ballistic missile beyond its borders, probably into the Indian Ocean, they $27.

In addition, China has built a solid-fuel production plant and is developing a solid-fuel ICBM, the analysts say.

The preparations for the launch beyond China's borders include the outfitting of a special tracking ship and the extension of

32 Youths End Hunger Strike In Rome Prison

ROME. May 31 (AP) .-- Thirtytwo young foreign prisoners have ended a 13-day hunger strike in a Rome prison after failing to move authorities to drop drug charges against them.

Police said that the prisoners. from 13 countries, ended their demonstration in Rebibble prison yesterday.

The foreigners are all awaiting trial or serving sentences on charges of posession of hashish. Some have been held for more than eight months.

They had signed a petition charging that the penal code provision under which they were arrested was "anacronistic and ambiguous."

The petition was addressed to Premier Emilio Colombo, who is also justice minister, to the heads of both houses of parliament and to the press.

A senior weapons expert says that it is far from clear whether China will follow the pattern of the United States and the Soviet Union and first deploy liquidfuel ICBMs before moving to solid-fuel wespons, or will start with the more stable solid-fuel system.

It is estimated that it will probably take at least three years, after initial tests, for China to move to its first group of opera-tional ICBMs. The technology of solid fuel as well as liquid fuels should be mastered by that time, the weapons specialists sug-

Most analysts agree that China is capable of launching an ICBM any time it chooses. Some intelligence experts believe China has already done so, although on a short course.

Three-Stage Missile

Late last year, they say, China fired a three-stage missile from a new launch site in northeast Manchuria into western Sinklang Province, over a 2,200-mile course. Some analysts, on the basis of the size of the stages as seen in reconnaissance photos and other evidence, calculated that the missile could have been fired at least 3,500 miles, which would have carried it out over India into the Indian Ocean. In arms control talks, the United States and Russia have defined an ICBM as any ballistic missile that can travel over 3,000 its own customs facilities.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird told Congress in March about the probability of China's 88.ICL capacity to launch such a missile when he said: "The start of testing has not yet been confirmsoovenirs."

Satellite Launcher Analysts say the 2200-mile shot was believed to have been made with a liquid-fuel missile similar to the rockets that China used to orbit a 381-pound satellite in April, 1970, and a 486-pound satellite in March.

The first out-of-country tests are expected to range between 3,500 and 4,500 miles. The Indian Ocean is considered the most likely landing point, but some analysts say that a test firing into the Pacific Ocean is not ruled out.

For several months China has equipping the 12,000-ton freighter Heien Yang Hung in a shinyard near Canton with space tracking and telemetry devices, sources say. One analyst says the work has been completed and that the vessel sailed into the Indian Ocean recently on a cruise to familiarize the crew with the ship and her special gear. But many analysts say that Peking is so anxious to get admitted to the United Nations this fall that it is likely to defer its first ICBM test until after that

MEUDON, France, May 31 (UPD).—Organist and composer Marcel Dupre, 85, died at his home yesterday after a 73-year career that began when he was 12 and ended only three weeks ago with a concert at Albert Hall in London.

Mr. Dupré was for more than a hall century considered one of the world's leading improvisers and organists, with a profound influence on contemporary French playing.

He was a child prodigy, being named chief organist at St. Vivien Church in his native Rouen at the age of 12.

After study at the Paris Conservatory under Diemer and Guimant, he won the Grand Prix de Rome in 1914. Then followed a long career in which he played all over Europe and in the United

In 1934 he succeeded Charles Widor as organist of St. Sulpice Church in Paris.

In Philadelphia in 1921 at the inauguration of a new organ, Mr. Dupré improvised a symphony in four movements on seven themes. His posts included organ pro-fessorship and later directorship of the Paris Conservatory. He also headed the American Conserva-tory of Music in Fontainebleau and was a member of the Académie des Beaux-Arts. His major compositions included two oratorios for organ, choir and orchestra -- "De Profundis," in memory of fallen soldiers, and "France at Calvary," written for the rebuilding of Roven Cathedral. He also wrote nearly 100 other works.

PARIS, May 31 (AP).-Leftist intellectuals including Jean-Paul Sartre came to the defense today of a Paris journalist who was injured Saturday after a street costration.

The journalist, Alain Jaubert said he got into a police van to accompany a man who had been injured during the demon-stration, in favor of "the people of Martinique."

Mr. Jaubert claimed he was beaten up by police in the van for more than an hour while the van drove through the Montmartre district, and then was thrown out of the van along with the demonstrator.

However, police contended that Mr. Jaubert hurt himself jumping into the moving police van, and then shouted insults at the and then shouled insults at the police and eventually injured three of them. He was charged with assaulting police officers. Both he and the demonstrator were arrested and hospitalized. A manifesto signed by Mr. Sartre: and other intellectuals supported Mr. Jaubert's version of the incident and said that neither his lawyer nor wife had been able to contact him. Mr. Jaubert works for a scientific newspaper and the Nouvel Ob-servateur, a liberal weekly.

In Paris to promote the U.S. erhibit at the air show, the three astronauts, Rear Adm. Alan Shepard, Capt. Edgar Mit-chell and Col. Stuart Roosa, presented and commented on a film of their flight to the moon last February.

The U.S. pavilion auditorium, where they made their presentation as the public filed by in the background, was only three-quarters full. When the session was opened to reporters' queries following the film commentary, only one question was asked by members of the international press.

A British newsman asked America'e most recent moonmen if they had any plans to discuss cooperation with the Soviet Union's cosmonauts, Adm. Shepard replied that they were not here to discuss anything of e technical nature with the cosmomauts but that talks were being cartied on another level concerning exchange of scientific information with the Russians and the possibility of docking a U.S. craft and a Soviet spaceship in orbit.

U.S. Food, Drug Agency Called Inadequate of prescription drugs. WASHINGTON, May 31 (WP). Watch the Source

-Americans cannot be sure of the purity and safety of their contaminant-and - chemical-laden foods and drugs, an expert committee, told the government last The Food and Drug Administration, the agency responsible, suffers from 'poorly managed laboratories," lack of sound scientific information, "a curious eurs of secrecy" and even "an unhurried atmosphere," the group said.

By Victor Cohn

Some FDA laboratories are first-rate, it reported, but some are so poorly managed that their scientists "seem unable to describe their work coherently." "The committee left their labs with a good deal of confusion about what is being done in them," Dr. Roy E. Ritts jr. of the Mayo Clinic, chairman of the ed hoc science advisory committee, told a news conference.

FDA Lauded

Still, his committee concluded -in an examination commissioned by FDA itself 18 months ago -the agency "does an extra-ordinary job in many ways" in protecting the public.

The largest problems, the group said, are that food and drug technology hava outstripped FDA's abilities, and that in a of thousands of food additives and powerful new drugs, FDA feces "enormous responsfbilities" with "limited resources."

As just one area of "possible danger to the public," the committee pointed to the vast use of antibiotics. in livestock and poultry feeds, despite "the fect that the public health significance of drug residues in meat and poultry is not well understood," The committee recommended a long list of administrative and scientific changes, including federal certification of the safety and effectiveness of every batch

In Self-Commissioned Study

The group felt strongly that "overall surveillance at the source" must come "to insure the quality and safety" of all foods and drugs, said one member, Dr. Willard A. Krehl of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphía Much has been done to implement committee re tions already, reported FDA Commissioner Dr. Charles C. Ed-wards, who ordered the study shortly after he took office.

But the reforms cannot be fully accomplished, he said-and certainly all foods and drugs cannot be monitored-without large increases in FDA's $85 million budget, slated to increase by just $9.7 million next year. Eventually, Dr. Edwards said, the budget may have to be doubled.

The committee urged that FDA act without considering "eco-nomic or political factora."

It cited FDA's decision to ban cyclamate sweeteners (because they prodoced cancer in test ls) as "an illustration of e forced and hurried judgment with inadequate, premature or unconfirmed scientific input admixed with political and industry pressures.

'Shaky' Data Cited

Dr. Ritts explained that he feels cyclamates should be off the market. But the scientific data "shaky," be said, and the Was law (which forbids any foodstuffs which cause animal cancers' may be too inflexible.

Among detailed findings, the committee-the first nongovernment group given carte blanche to probe FDA, Dr. Ritts saidfound that:

Back to Brandeis?

In a global society that matches massiveness with complexity, there is a growing movement to return to the late Justice Brandels's theory of the "curse of bigness." Dr. Michael Young in Britain and Robert C. Townsend in the United States have both written with witty force about the inefficiency and corruption of vast enterprises. Ralph Nader and his Raiders are crusading actively against them. Charles de Ganlle sought to temper the effects of bigness in industry by worker participation; President Mixon has urged Congress to curh big government by "creating more centers of meaningful power."

Bigness can be a curse, can produce both inefficiency and the perversion of democratic institutions. But the answer does not seem to lie simply in making little ones out of big ones. It would be nice to think that a city like Paris, or Munich, or London, or New York, could be supplied with all its food by a surrounding belt of thousands of small market gardens, dairies, pastures and farms. But they can't-and that is one reason why the farmers rioted in Brussels.

It would be nice to think, too, that the world's millions could be fed by men working close to the soil, with simple tools, that would require no massive infrastructura of manufacturing, research and transportation. Ivan Illich has founded a theory of deschooling society on the assumption that simplification of the tools and services employed in life can make it possible to eliminate education as an outwardly imposed passport to employment-as a commodity which youth is compelled to acquire. But he does not seem to he aware-nor does Paul Goodmen, who was his mentor in much. seem willing to acknowledge-that high technological and scientific skills not only permeate the whole of society, capitalist and Communist, but are essential.

It is not solely a question of ."progress". in consumer goods and gadgets; it is simply one of survival. The "green revolution" was not the result of a plain farmer cross-breeding wheat in the intervals of cultivating his crop. It was part of the massive quest, as massive as that which virtually eliminated poliomyelitis, and, in its scientific leadership, as "elitist."

What the world needs may well be a fusion of all the ideas of the followers of Brandels with the skills of all the followers of Henry Ford. It needs mass production: it could use some practicable limits on consumption; above all, it could use limits on population and in the meanwhile, whatever imagination can do to humanize the big institutions and give man a sense of his own worth (to say nothing of giving woman a sense of hers); whatever can be done to make leisure valuable and power genuinely responsible, must be done. Man is currently at odds with his environment and his fellows -tragically so. He must find answers-but he can be assured that they will be neither simple in content nor easy to apply.

The Military Ethic

"It is no secret," Presidant Nixon told the Corps of Cadets at West Point on Saturday, "that the discipline, integrity, patriotism and self-sacrifice, which are the very lifeblood of an armed force, and which the corps represents, can no longer be taken for granted in the Army in which you will serve."

It is, as he says, no secret. But it is a tribute to its importance that the commander in chief should thus address the men who have chosen to be educated for a career in the Army. Such candor reflects in part the basic disillusionment with war and its ways that is so prominent in America today, and in part an old ambivalence that has always characterized the American approach to military service.

The Vietnamese war, fought under the immediate scrutiny of television and the hot debates about its necessity and morality. to the accompaniment of publicized scandals without abridging the basic rights of those who serve and fight.

This last problem is complicated when conscripts fight a war they do not understand, when the injection of "the Good Soldier Schweik" into the ranks in sizable numbers makes discipline hard to enforce and morale difficult to sustain. But it has never been easy to form an organization that will obey orders to stand up and die, without knowing the reason for the order. or for the war. The old system, which persists in not a few armies today, was to make the soldiers fear their officers more than the enemy.

This aspect of the "military ethic" has never been popular in the United States;" Baron von Steuben, during the Revolution, commented to a brother-officer in Europe that there a man would be told what to do and did it: "I am obliged to say, This is the reason why you ought to do that' and then he does it." Today, the struggle between free will and authority within the armed forces is greater than ever, and the practicable dividing line less clear. The extent of this problem in the United States might be considered a humane awakening, just as the reaction against World War I, and America's part in it, was acclaimed a generation or so ago. But one could view the criticism of the police with greater equanimity if there were no thieves or murderers, and one could be more complacent abont attacks upon the military ethic if they were universal. Adolf Hitler reversed many verdicts on the war in which he served as corporal. Will someone, some day, do the same for sweeping judgments based on Vietnam?

Big organizations had become aware of the problem, Young They tried to obtain said. cooperation by communicating. But they had to spend so much time "passing information up and down and sideways that nothing much else is done besides just communicating."

Young's Prescription

All those who have been in large bureaucracies will recognize the disease described by Michael Young. But his cure will still be hard for many to accept: "Seize every opportunity to reduce the scale of organization. Make things smaller, not bigger, in industry and in the public services. and often efficiency as well as humanity will be enhanced."

great advantage in encouraging community.

Young's analysis has more urgent and more poignant meaning for the United States. We are continental country and have always been so proud of that -what middle-aged American does not remember thrilling in the sweep of America across the map? And in so many ways wa have worshipped size: big business, Whitmanesouc landscape, even giant apples and strawberries.

And now we know it does not work. The citizen begins to feel what Young articulates. The big businessman tries to find ways of allowing smallness and initiative inside the huge corporate structure. The federal government looks for new relationships with localities and states. There is a vague striving for "participation." History and the Constitution raise obstacles to real reform in the United States. We know that we ought to give more power to local governments, but they are so often the wrong kind of government, in the wrong place. As an alternative to a true return to smaller institutions we consider such ideas as revenue-sharing, but they founder in the complexities of our illogical political boundaries.

In the end we way have to come to radical change in political structure and business ideology. Right now it is enough to begin by recognizing the renewed truth of what Louis Brandels taught about the curse bigness.

Liberals used to think of the Brandelsian view as holy but anachronistic. Only centralized power, we thought, could over-come the lethargy and selffish-

Bernard Levin From London: ... all the evidence for many years now has suggested that the voters are increasingly skeptical about their political leaders of all political hues.

LONDON.-Volatility is the word this week. The British have been doing a good deal of voting, and the political soothsayers, examining the returns with the kind of intensity the Roman augurs used to bring to their study of chicken's entralis, have come up with volatility as the answer—though it has to be pointed out that they always do come up with voistility as the answer whenever they can't actually say just what the entrails portend. Volatile, that's what we

але. First came the municipal clections, the first on a countrywide scale since 1968. Now, 1968 was a year in which the theu Labor government was at the very nadir of its fortuncs and Labor candidates had been slaughtered wholesale. It was only to be expected, therefore, that Labor would do well thereafter, would recover some of the ground lost in 1968. So indeed Labor did, but the swing went even further; and the Tories lost seats, and municipal councils, that they had held for years without interruption.

The unvarying response of governments in this country (other countries, too, I daresay) to uofavorable result; in mid-term elections is to claim that their policies are fine, they are just what the country needs, but they are "bound to be unpopular temporarily"-with the rider that when the country realizes what loving care the government is really taking of the people, the people will swing back in droves to their true political allegiance. At the same time, the minority party announces that the midterm results are, on the contrary, a clear indication that the country is sick of the in-party and its leaders, and that the minuta the voters get the chance they are going to throw them out, bag and baggage. From the sidelines comes a murmur from the soothsayers: "Volatile"

But the exercise of force to promote peace is now often questioned when it is used by police on the streets, and it is very hard to form an army, and harder still to fight a war,

International Opinion

The Cairo Accord

The Soviet-Egyptian friendship treaty does not introduce any new element into the Middle Eastern situation. It does not, for instance. commit Cairo to a pro-Soviet stand on all conceivable issues, any more than barter of Egyptian cotton for Soviet arms aid many years ago. The real significance of the friendship treaty, however, is that it has helped President Sadat to consolidate himself at home. His bargaining position with the United States and Israel has greatly improved with the new promise of more Russian arms and military advisers.

Tragedy Into Farce

Mr. Brezhnev knows that the invasion of Czechoslovakia has shattered the Communist movement more deeply than any other evant since the Stalinist purges. But has he really convinced himself that those aplits will be healed by the sight of the Czechoslovak Communist party thanking him for invading? The opposite is happening. Where the invasion itself was tragedy, the sight of the Czechoslovak party applauding that tragedy becomes farce. It has only reinforced the image of the Soviet Union's total domination of Czechoslovakia, The Britisb Communist party, to its credit, decided to boycott the congress rather than submit to joining in censored proceedings. -From the Guardian (London).

Connally and the Dollar

That the Americans should be resentful about the ingratitude of certain of their allies for their largely successful efforts to keep the peace of the world, and to promote its prosperity in the past quarter-century, is understandable.

The Treasury Secretary is on less firm ground, however, in denying so emphatically that the dollar would be devalued or, what amounts to the same, that the price of gold would be increased. He is in danger of having to eat his words one day, as Mr. Wilson had to over sterling devaluation in 1967. There is already a strong feeling among many American businessmen that the dollar is overvalued: and that this accounts, at least in part, for the success of certain foreign imports; such as German and Japanese Cars.

WASHINGTON,-'In these difficult years, America has suffered from a fever of words; from inflated rhetoric that promises more than it can possibly deliver; from angry rhetoric that fans discontents into hatred; from bombastic rhetoric that postures instead of persuading." Thus spoke Richard Nixon in his Inaugural Address, Jan. 20, The passage has become 1969. something of a favorite of editorial writers, criticizing the excessive rhatoric of the Vice-President, and logically so.

The President's remedy was a suggestion that we all lower our voices. He described it as a simple thing. But it has proved otherwise, and not just for the Vice-President-or for editorialists, whose weakness for polemics is well known, if not traditional. Increasingly, it seems that the raising of voices is an occupational hazard for some newspaper columnists.

Some months ago, I read a comple of my favorite columnists with the President's advice in mind, and came up with a new perspective.

India and Pakistan

Millions of refugees-Muslims and others-hava flooded India escaping from what France-Soir (14 May) .described as "Abattoirs humains au Pakistan." The Pakistan Ambassador in his letter to you today (May 26) says that it is India's fault. We have many faults but we are not responsible for the ruthless repression in East Pakistan. The Guardian of London etated on the 31st March: "Henceforth the country [Pakistan] must be regarded as particularly brutal and insensitive military dictatorship.... In Newsweek of 26th April we "On orders from the Isread: lamabad Higb Command, troops systematically gunned down students, engineers, doctors, and any other persons with a potential for leadership. ...."

What is the genesis of this genocide? Because Mujibur Rahman, with a massive popular mandate (167 out of 169 East Pakistan seats in the 300-member National Assembly, and 288 out of 300 seats in the East Pakistan Assembly) wanted to implement the six-point program of provincial autonomy-known since 1966-on which he fought the recent elections. According to Keesing's Contemporary Archives, the majority of the population (54 percent: of Pakistan-about 73 million (of which about 9.5 milion are non-Muslims) live in East "professional pessimists" . . . A swing, it is worth pointing out, which would, if repeated nationwide at a general election, sweep Mr: Heath into oblivion and the Labor party back to office with a huge majority.

In recent years this has in fact been the regular pattern: Govern-ments elected even with huge popular majorities have found that the honeymoon seems to last for a shorter and shorter time. After all, Mr. Heath has been in office for less than a year, and already, it seems, the electorate has turned sour on him and his policies.

ARIS (IHT) .-- Georges Rouault, or make it a banner for R cause. Rououit's work is simple in themalic conlent—a fact that favors this sort of projection. And this projection is also encouraged by the artist's explicitly moralistic intentions. Whores, male and female clowns, lawyers and judges, and other figures either of misery or of pomp and pretense are among the dominant thenes of his work that appear alongside the numerous religious subjects he painted. But instead of acfually showing us something. Ronault is intent on telling us aboot it, and in yielding to the temptation to use his art as a vehicle for his strongly felt but hardly original or personal convictions, he injects luto much of it a note of obstinate banalily that is difficulf to ignore. Much of this can be imputed in the influence of his friend Léon Bloy, a novalist and polemicist of a surprisingly coprological bent whose novels portrayed the souls of the petite-bour-geoisie as abysses of depravity and their bodies as compendiums of horrors. Bloy, in his polemical writings, impartially piled ordure upon the heads of his adversaries and upon his own. Rouault picked up certain of his moral simplifications, but having a gentle soul he did not adopt Bloy's rather porcine caustlcity. The 'Good' simplification is tha fact that most of Rouault's "good" characters-Pierrof (the innocenf abused), Christ and Veronica-are superficially and naively sentimental-on the spiritual level of the 19th-century Epinal woodcuts indeed of the unfortunate Saint-Sulpice plaster statuary that Rouault was never claimed by the fauves (or vice-versa) hut some of his hest work would not seem out of place in a fauvist retrospective. Such, in my opinion, is the case with a painting "Nocturne Chrétien" (done like when Rouault was 821 that achieves a greater degree of mobility than almost any other of the works here on display. while the colors, in this less rigid setting, show their affinity to the

Musie in Italy: Puccini's 'Turandot'

By William Weaver

FLORENCE (IHT) .-- With its new production of Puccini's "Turandot," which opened here Friday night, the Florence Maggio Musicale Festival returned to its announced theme for this year: The encounter of other cultures with the West. Puccini's chinolserie fairy tale, though we know he used authentic Chinese tunes here and there, is hardly a case of vital cultural cross-fertiliza tion: hut the exotic elements, the clanging and (inkling percussion, flic stronge costumes and customs lend spice to what is, underneath, a verismo opera.

The conducting of Georges Pretre seemed designed to accentuate these very elements: the listener was constantly reminded of the percussion section, semetimes at the expense of the main body of the orchestra and, indeed, of the At times, Pretre was simply too loud, niusic. Placido Domingo's volce is slight for the heroic part of Calaf; and though he occasionally forced it beyond its natural strength, he was inaudible at some crucial moments, the revelution of his name, for example). Prefre also allowed the singers to cherich favorite notes, so the general impression was of a well-paced reading. There is no denying, however, that the conductor can generate excitement, the great mass scenes were vigorously effective.

In the title role, Hana Janku, with a voice of Nilssonian proportions, could ride the orches tra and by the last act, she was also able to make the volce, which had seemed hard and icy, turn human and almost warm. The Liu of Maria Chiara was simply moving, without coyness or affectation. The rest of the cast was also strong, especially the Ping-Pang-Pong trio of Renato Capecchi, Piero de Palma, and Franco Ricciardi. Lugi Squarzin: deployed masses and moved sela-ists with tactful suitability, and Pier Luga Pizzi's magnificent, glistening sets-which seemed 10 be made of fish scales-framed and enhanced the action.

Not much need be said about the Florence Ballet's first program, a bill comprehending Milhaud's "Création du Monde." Prokofiet's "Prodigal Son." Stravinsky's "Nightingale" and Buson's "Indian Panfasy." All were choreographed by Aurel Milloss with unflagging lack of imagination, which-in the Prokofley particularly-was usuall; coupled with irritating pretentiousness. If the Maggio insists on devoting such a large part of Its festival to dance, they will have to jazz up the house company and find another choreographer.

But the best way to see Ibiza follow their own inspiration. They fashions is still to walk down the tiny, sun-drenched streets. Busco sides, they dress in such an individual manner that they are on Calle Mayor is one of the best new leather places. # Callus Mitsubishi Corporation

A new era, a new name, and one that fits us better.

Mitsubishi Corporation is the new Englishlanguage rendering of our corporate name for use in preference to Mitsubishi Shoji Kaisha, Limited, from June 1, 1971.

For many years, we were primarily a trading company. One of Japan's largest, it's true.

Today, it's different. We do trade, of course. Worldwide and all over Japan. But we have grown in so many different directions-in the promotion of ventures and projects, in the development of material resources, in the realignment of domestic distribution systemsthat we have actually outgrown our old name.

Call us. We're still doing business at the same place. The new name is more us. And more in tune with what we do today.

Analysts Diagnose Drug Stocks' Ailments

By Vartanig G. Vartan NEW YORK, May 31 (NYT) .-Drug stocks, among Wall Street's favorite groups in the last decade or so, appear to be catching cold lately.

The advice of some analysts: Avoid prolonged exposure in certain cases.

One leading advisory service noted that "the regulatory cli-mate is getting tougher" and went on to say that drug companies were finding it more dif-ficult to develop completely new products.

Vulnerability Noted

Other analysts, while conceding that many drugmakers will post higher profits this year, point to the vulnerability of certain price-earnings ratios that run 25-to-1 or even higher.

Commercial Solvents, a company better known for bulk pharmaceuticals and animal feed sunplements than for dramatic new products, offers a case in point Last Tuesday an influx of sell orders prevented the stock from opening. On Wednesday it did trade-and thereupon fell 3 7/8 to 28 3/4.

formed the government for the last three years could see a substantial redoction in their 20-seat majority in next fall's general elections.

"I think we'll be back," Mr. Baunsgaard said, "but the margin could be smaller."

The government's decline in popularity is attributed to the stiff tax increases, price freezes and then price controls imposed to arrest the 8 1/2 percent price inflation and a worsening bal-ance-of-payments deficit. Consumption is stagnant and economic growth has slowed to 2 percent

In the five years through 1969, Danish consumer prices rose 6 1/2 percent a year, a rate matched only by Spain, while hourly earnings rose 11.2 percent, again ex-ceeded only by Spain's 13.7 percent. Denmark's greater dependence on foreign trade has created serious difficulties in its international payments.

To handle these problems, Mr. Baunsgaard foresaw a continuing government role in recommending wage and price levels. "The free-market system cannot work without risk of unemployment, but the welfare state says it is the government's obligation that there employment for all," he said. This means we shall have to give advice."

Rostand and Man's Search for His Origins The State of Paranoia

TUESDAY, JUNE 1, 1971

WASHINGTON.-In the city of them, and they have demanded of the Schizophrenic River, live that the young people do nothing the rulers of the great country of Paranoia.

The rulers of Paranoia are constantly a n-nouncing a plot against the government by the citizens. The citizens are always announcing a plot by the government against the people.

Since these plots are passed on by Buchwald the news media, the rulers suspect there is a plot by the media to destroy the government. This has made the news media suspect that there is a plot against them by the rulers.

The leaders of Paranoia believe that if the news media would stop pointing out what is wrong in the country, the problems would go away. The news media thinks unless it points out the faults of the government, things will get WOR

Skin tone means a lot to the people of Paranoia, and the lightskinned people inhabit the best houses have the most money and live in deathly fear that the dark-skinned people will marry their daughters. The dark-skir-ned people live in deathly fear that the light-skinned people will kill them. Both the light-skinned people and the dark-skinned people are stocking up on guns, as each is suspicious that the other is plotting against them.

The young people suspect that the older people and the leaders are going to get them killed in some senseless war. So the young people have taken to the streets to protest. This has made the older people suspect that the young people are plotting against

Tough Stuff

DURHAM, England, May 31 (UPI),-Cooks at Durham jail have been asked to bake cakes with a lighter touch. The request followed an incident in which a prisoner grabbed a cake from a metal tray and threw it at a jailer, sending him reeling and cutting his face. "We want them to be less lethal weapons," one jailer said.

Manicdepressia, on the banks that the rulers use force to see to change the system. * * *

Many of the people in Paranoia believe that the large companies in the country are trying to destroy them by poisoning the air and the water. The large com-panies believe that there is a plot to prevent them from making the things the people want. The rulers are caught in between, because Paranoia's economy depends on the companies that are destroying the environment.

The rulers have promised the people to clean np the air and water. At the same time they have promised to raise the gross nstional product and give people full employment. Since the people know it's impossible to do both. they are very depressed.

There are not enough jobs in Paranoia, and therefore people have to go on welfare. The people who are working suspect the people on welfare of cleverly dodging work, and the people on welfare suspect the people who are working of keeping them off a payroll.

To make matters worse, the leaders of Paranoia believe that other countries are plotting egainst them, so they spend more than 50 percent of their budget for defense.

A great deal of this money goes for digging large holes in the ground for great hig missiles. which everyone assures everyone else will never be used.

Every night before they go to sleep, the rulers of Paranoia look under their beds to see who is plotting against them. In the morning they check again. Even if they don't see anybody, they suspect the worst,

Because of this the citizens of Paranois are always looking over their shoulders and wondering if their phones are tapped.

With everyone suspecting everyone else of B conspiracy it's impossible to solve any of Paranoia's pressing problems.

In desperation the leaders of Paranoia have asked the United States for help. But so far the U.S. has hesitated to get involved. A high-ranking American official told Paranoia's ambassador, "Since we don't have any such problems in our country, we wouldn't know where to start."

By John L. Hess VILLE D'AVRAY, France (NYT) .- Like Albert Einstein, whom he resembles, Jean Rostand cannot accept that Man is only the product of a roll of the dice in a universal game of chance. Musing with a visitor in his secluded but famous house where for half a century he has explored the mysteries of heredity in frogs, Rostand took gentle issue with bis fellow biologist Jacques Monod. In his best-selling book "Le Hasard et la Nécessité." Monod argues that the human race evolved not as the result of some grand design of God and nature but by pure happenstance.

"It may he the only valid theory." Rostand said, "but I think there must be mechanisms we do not know that explain how these chance variations have ended up by making man." In his 77th year, Rostand is a living evolutionary link in man's search for his origins; he connects the naturalists of the 19th century with the microcellular biologists of today such as Monod, whom he sai. he found "s little dry, a little too intellectual "

For a moment, he looked guilty, like a benign old elergyman gently deploring a minor lapse. A small, rumpled man in a corduroy jacket flecked with pipe ash, he made s striking contrast with the nearby Dufy portrait of a bold, almost arrogant boulevardier in smart tweeds; his father, Edmond, author of "Cyrano de Bergerac."

Place of Honor

It was the most contemporary of the dozens of paintings that lined the walls of the faded living room. A cabinet of leatherbound books stood in a corner with the place of honor accorded to the ten volumes of "Souvenirs Entomologiques" of Jean-Henri Fabre. "He is the man who meant the most in my life," Rostand said.

Like all men of letters around the turn of the century, Edmond Rostand admired Pabre as a writer. But his son Jean at age 8 was carried away with the enchantment of Fabre's famous experiments with insects. And so a career was born.

Rostand acknowledged that Fabre had tried to disprove Darwin and confirm a grand eternal design in nature. Rostand himself was an early convert to neo-Darwinism and modern genetics. As a young man, he was the first to translate into French the revolutionary work of Thomas Hunt Morgan and other Americans on the chromosome theory of heredity.

"They made fun of Morgan," he said. "I remember that people at the Sorbonne in those days used to say Morgan lacked the scientific mind, that he was a dreamer, that all that was fiction.".

Jean Rostand ... living evolutionary link.

Younger researchers cartied forward the study of genes and chromosomes into the molecular structure of "the code of life." Bot Rostand screnely followed in the footsteps of Darwin and Fabre, exploring the mysteries of nature by observation and experiment in a manner that an earlier age would have found comprehensible.

Using specimens from the ponds near his house, almost within sight of the Elife Tower, Rostand managed to produce tadpoles that had mothers but no fathers, by treating unfertilized eggs with cold and other stimuli. His dozens of books popularizing biology and drawing philosophic conclusions made him famous, and won him the seat in the Académie Française previously held by Edouard Herriot.

If his style is closer to that of Fabre, Rostand acknowledged that "philosophically. I am very close to Monod." But as to "the fashionable dilemma" of chance or providence as an explanation for natureno," he said.

Rostand said he sgreed entirely with "a very pretty page" of Moood that describes man as alone in the universe. Monod went on to say that a man is therefore required to work out an ethic based on scientific objectivity.

"I agree with the ethic of science, the ethic of truth, bot that does not seem enough to me either," he said. "I find it a little dry, a little too intellectual. I think there's a little warmth of heart missing there. I don't know whether it's enough to say you're looking for knowledge, you're looking for truth. I find that a little cold. "Personally I miss the dimension of brotherhood, of love of man. I think that may count even more than truth."

Choices

As he rejects the choice between God and accident, he said, he also rejects the choice between capitalism and Soviet Communism. A rebel in science and politics from his early youth. Rostand admitted apologetically to a nostalgic attachment to a "good old-fashioned socialism."

Here again he appeared to be an evolutionary link between 19th-century humanism and modern trends of social criticism, Like Monod, he broke with Soviet Communicm notably over the Lysenko affair, when the Kremlin sought to oppose genetics with theories espousing the disproved inheritance of acquired characteristics, "Mind now," he said, "there's a lot of good in Marxism. What I cannot accept is Marxist biology. The church, unfortu-nately, attacked Galileo and Darwin. But there is a Marxist church, too, which attacked genetics. I don't accept it. I don't accept any church and I don't accept the Marrist bible any more than the

' in the women's liberation movement. "Homosexuals have rights. I spree." he said, "But It's not the same thing. It's a little like drugs. Nowadays they want to mix up everything: paelfism, drugs, sexual per-

'Nuisance'

The biologist took issue with other newtrends. He said he was a pessimist for the long term, because ultimately the race would disappear and anyway. "we are each going to die, which is a nuisance."

But for the short term, he did not agree with those such as Monod who fear an early extinction of life because of the atomic bomb or the population explosion and pollution.

"I think they're exaggerated a little." he said. "But I shouldn't say it, because It's by exaggerating that yoo get results. They may be right to sound the alarm but I don't think the world will become uninhabitable in 50 years.

"I believe in social progress. I don't know where we're going but I know we're going there. Anyway, we must work for it."
